The Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter details “how the U.S. business press could miss the most important economic implosion of the past eighty years” (Eric Alterman, media columnist for The Nation). In this sweeping, incisive post-mortem, Dean Starkman exposes the critical shortcomings that softened coverage in the business press during the mortgage era and the years leading up to the financial collapse of 2008. He examines the deep cultural and

Access Free Investigative

Journalist shifts—some unavoidable, some self-inflicted—that eroded journalism's appetite for its role as watchdog. The result was a deafening silence about systemic corruption in the financial industry. Tragically, this silence grew only more profound as the mortgage madness

reached its terrible apogee from 2004
through 2006.

Starkman frames his analysis in a broad argument about
journalism itself,
dividing the
profession into two competing
approaches—access reporting and accountability
reporting—which rely

reporters focused on profiling executives
and informing
